JEANNE BILOA
Role: President, Bagyelli’s Cultural and Development Association (BACUDA)
Fields of expertise: Organizational development, local governance, gender, fundraising.
Jeanne has worked with numerous organizations focused on sustainable development in Cameroon and on improving the quality of life for communities in Campo Ma’an and surrounding areas. She has helped develop projects that introduce sustainable agricultural practices for the protection of forests of the Pygmy Peoples. She also supported the development of participatory development plans for the Pygmy Peoples and the mediation process to resolve the WWF-Kudu/Zombo conflicts. Until 2021, Jeanne worked with the Tropical Biology Association (TBA) and the Critical Ecosystem Partnership Fund in the areas of development and fundraising.

BAHATI SUMAILI
Role: President, Monitoring and Evaluation Committee for activities in the Kisimbosa Local Community Forestry Concession.
Fields of expertise: Local governance, youth, sustainable agriculture, conservation.
Bahati is an Indigenous Pygmy woman from the Mubuluko Mumbuti community in North Kivu province. She has worked hand in hand with young people from the community of Kisimbosa in the construction of roads to facilitate the commercialization of their agricultural products. Bahati also provides support to the community’s group of patrollers who monitor and protect the territory from poaching and deforestation activities. She recently helped create an innovative model of territorial management for communities that harmonizes agricultural and community livelihood practices with biodiversity conservation.

BRUNELLE IBULA BOLONDO
Role: Project Manager and National Coordinator, AFAP-RDC
Fields of expertise: Sustainable agriculture, conservation, gender.
Brunelle promotes an agricultural resilience initiative that aims to ensure food security and fight malnutrition for women in the DRC. Her organization supports Indigenous women in recovering their traditional agricultural and livelihood practices such as gathering, fishing, and hunting, which were abandoned due to their forests’ destruction. She believes that the destruction of the forest is “a kind of war that has caused the gradual disappearance of Indigenous Peoples, the death of women, and the abandonment of their way of life.”
KABILE MUHOMBO
Role: Customary Chief of the locality of Bananingi
Fields of expertise: Community livelihoods, environmental protection.
Kabile is the chief guardian of the traditional knowledge and practices of the Indigenous Peoples in the Bananingi locality in the Walkale Territory, North Kivu province. The protection of the forest's fauna is among her community's most valued traditions. She shares: “In our customs...it is forbidden for women to eat and even touch certain forest animals such as the giant pangolin and the leopard.”

MARIE DOROTHÉE LISENGA BAFALIKIKE
Role: Griot (singer) and Indigenous Knowledge Expert
Fields of expertise: Livelihoods, Indigenous and traditional arts and customs
Marie Dorothée is an Indigenous Baaka woman from Yahuma territory, Buma sector in Tshopo province. She has more than 20 years of experience in the valorization and promotion of Indigenous and traditional knowledge held by women, including culinary, musical, and Indigenous weaving arts. Marie Dorothée maintains an inventory of biological resources found in the region's territories and has supported the commercialization of various Indigenous products using caterpillars, honey, and mushrooms. She holds a degree in Applied Pedagogy.

MUKAWA NAMURUNGA
Role: Traditional Healer, the Kalehe territory.
Fields of expertise: Medicinal plants, traditional agriculture, community management.
Mukawa is an Indigenous Mubuluko Mumbuti Pygmy woman from South Kivu province. She, like many Kalehe women, is a traditional healer with deep knowledge of medicinal plants and fauna. Mukawa is an expert in traditional agricultural products such as yam, bihuku and masunga, and participates in community management of her territory. She also accompanies her community's group of patrollers in the control and protection of the territory against poaching and deforestation. She shares: “For the Indigenous pygmy women of Kalehe, biodiversity conservation is of great importance because without conservation, we run the risk of losing our culture and traditions.”
PRESCILLIA MONIREH KAPUPU
Role: Community Facilitator and Program Officer, ANAPAC – DRC and Facilitator, COSPAB Secretariat
Fields of experience: Nature conservation and biodiversity
Prescillia is an Indigenous woman from Kibumba village, Mwenga territory in South Kivu Province in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. In her role, she works for the promotion and enhancement of customary territories conserved by the country’s Indigenous Peoples and local communities. Prescillia has a degree in biology and has been passionate about nature and biodiversity since early childhood.

Central African Republic

PRISCA MBOTA
Role: Facilitator, the Community Rights Development Component of the APDS training.
Fields of expertise: Sustainable development, Indigenous rights in protected areas.
Priscia Mbota supports training on community rights and sustainable development in the Dzanga-Sangha Dense Forest Reserve (APDS), a protected area in CAR. She is currently Secretary General of the Ndima Kali association, a Group composed of Indigenous BaAka and Sangha-Sangha youth from the Dzanga-Sangha area.

Role: Coordinator, Community Action of the Indigenous Women of Congo (ACFAC)
Fields of expertise: Land governance, gender justice, and climate change
Marleine leads ACFAC, an association that advocates for the rights of Indigenous Peoples—particularly the women and girls among them. Her organization promotes inclusive land governance to fight climate change and encourage harmonious living between Indigenous Peoples and the Bantus in the Plateau area. Marleine is a graduate of the Michel Mono Institute of Training and Information where she obtained a degree in Human Resources Management. She has received training in project development, management, and evaluation by CODAP in Geneva, Switzerland and was an official spokesperson for REPACLEAC at COP27 in Egypt.
ALEXIA BANKUNDIYE
Role: Indigenous Women's Rights Leader and Member, REPALEAC-Rwanda
Fields of expertise: Biodiversity conservation, agro-ecology, and gender
Alexia is a member of REPALEAC-Rwanda and has been working with the Indigenous Batwa community in economic empowerment and biodiversity conservation for the last five years. She leads the implementation and coordination of conservation initiatives by promoting agro-value chains for mushroom and vegetable cultivation in the Western Province of Rwanda.

FLORENCE YANKURIJE
Role: Batwa Community Leader
Fields of experience: Climate change, genetic natural resources, and livelihoods
Florence oversees production of improved stoves as a means of empowering Indigenous Batwa women to access alternative income sources and fight against climate change in North Province, Rwanda. She has also provided community women training on the fundamental aspects of access to genetic resources and the fair and equitable sharing of benefits arising from their use (known as ABS - Access and Benefit Sharing ABS) in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Florence has a university degree in sociology and is a member of REPALEAC-Rwanda.

MARIE CHANTAL UWABABYEYI
Role: Batwa Community Leader
Fields of experience: Gender-based violence, climate change, and biodiversity conservation
Marie Chantal holds a diploma in Humanity Education and has worked for more than 10 years supporting women’s economic empowerment, protecting Indigenous Peoples’ rights, fighting against gender-based violence, and protecting biodiversity. She is responsible for raising small livestock and beekeeping as alternative sources of income generation and biodiversity conservation in her community in South Province, Rwanda.
MARTHE MUHAWENIMANA

Role: Batwa Community Leader

Fields of experience: Climate change, biodiversity conservation, and women's economic empowerment

Marthe is a representative of the Batwa Indigenous women with more than 20 years of experience empowering women in her community. She has a diploma in Humanist Primary Education and has received dozens of trainings, including on GBV and HIV/AIDS prevention, conflict resolution, ABS and intellectual property, and many others. She leads a local initiative in the Northern Province district of Musanze and the City of Kigali’s Nyarugenge district designed to economically empower Batwa women through modern basketry technology and to reduce conflict in protected areas.

SAVANA NNANGA OBIANG

Role: Gender Program Lead, the Nsombuo Abalgue-Dzal Association (NADA)

Fields of expertise: gender, climate resilience, protected areas, APAC-territories de vie.

Savana Nnanga Obiang began working with NADA in 2020 as a fellow. She is now a community facilitator and gender lead with the organization. In June 2022, Savana created the “Gabon Women’s Platform” within NADA, for which she won the Luc Hoffmann Institute (now Unearthodox) Award for Excellence in Ecosystem Management. Nnanga is currently helping to promote gender-sensitive approaches in development of North Gabon in partnership with the Unearthodox team. She also supports programs for building climate resilience among women in the Massaha villages.

Savana is part of a project funded by the Paul K. Fayerobend Foundation (PKF) that seeks to promote community management and defense of the APAC-Territoires de vie of northeastern Gabon. She has trained organizations such as FG sarl around the concept of APAC-Territoires de vie and has presented papers on the importance of these areas in achieving biodiversity conservation in Gabon.
